Summary

The AFCEA Hawaii Educational Foundation's Leadership Forum brings together a small group of emerging leaders to learn from senior leadership in an intimate setting. The Forum is held during the TechNet Asia Pacific Conference Tuesday through Thursday.

The focus is on practical applications of leadership for mid-level managers in the commercial and defense communities.

Attendees actively participate in a program that combines lecture and classroom activities in 12 hours of instruction with key leader presentations. These lay leaders come from senior positions in the military, government, industry and academia. The course is complemented throughout by rich interaction, and both formal and informal networking opportunities.

Graduates of the Leadership Forum are eligible for continuing education units from George Mason University and are provided access to the Leadership Forum Alumni website.

Course Objectives

Develop an understanding of fundamental leadership principles and why a leader's core value framework must be integrated with those principles.

Gain an understanding of the differences and interrelationships between Leadership and Management and why both are essential to organizational success.

Develop an understanding and skills of how great leaders care for their most important resources - their people.

Develop an understanding of the leader's responsibilities for establishing the vision for the organization and a strategy to achieve it; and how to achieve buy-in from all stakeholders.

Develop an understanding of the necessity for, and techniques to establish, a climate of trust and accountability across the organization.

Develop an understanding of and learn successful techniques for establishing championship-caliber teamwork and unity of effort.

Develop a Personal Leadership Philosophy (PLP) that you will be proud to share with your people.

Cost

The cost of the Leadership Forum is normally $1200, but is discounted to $800 during TechNet Asia Pacific Conference. The cost includes TechNet registration fees, lunch with keynote speakers and all course materials. Participants are presented with certificates during the luncheon on Thursday. The forum is limited to a maximum of 25 participants so early registration is a must at https://www.afcea-hawaii.org/2018-leadership-forum/

All proceeds go to support STEM scholarships and STEM projects in our community.
